

Artist's thesis on nature of art

"To be an artist means to question the nature of art." That is what Sydney-based artist John Nixon demonstrates at the Australian Centre for Contemporary Art with his exhibition 'Thesis', showing until 20 March. He says that "non-objective art is the art of the twentieth century — like the skyscraper, the jet plane, pop music, cinema and television." Details: 654 6422. The centre is at Dallas Brooks Dve, South Yarra.

Picture: Jim Hooper