

THE ARTS

GUERRILLA ARTISTS TO VENICE

SPECULATION and gossip has gripped the art world in the lead up to the 54th Venice Biennale on Saturday. After complaining about airfares on his Facebook page, New York Magazine art critic Jerry Saltz this week proclaimed: "Hot Diggity-Dog! I finally figured out how to convert credit-card points into airline miles." Visitors will also be able to hobnob with filmmaker John Waters — a member of this year's Golden Lion jury. ACCA will be staging a series of guerilla performances by Australian artists, and luckily they won't be competing with actor/writer/artist James Franco's homage to the James Dean movie Rebel without a Cause, (that's Franco pictured) which has been indefinitely postponed.
